About the Pioneer Valley

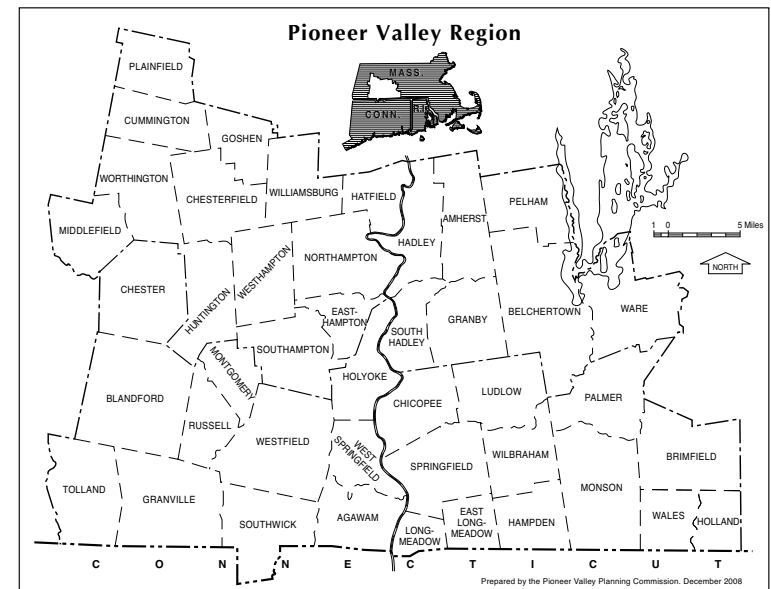

Located in the mid-western section of Massachusetts and covering an area about the same size as the state of Rhode Island, the Pioneer Valley region encompasses the fourth-largest metropolitan area in New England. The region is bisected by the Connecticut River and bounded on the north by Franklin County, to the south by the state of Connecticut, to the east by the Quabbin Reservoir, and to the west by Berkshire County. The Pioneer Valley region, which is comprised of the 43 cities and towns of the Hampden and Hampshire county areas, is home to about 611,000 people (2007 Census estimate) and the urbanized areas of Springfield, Chicopee, and Holyoke.

The third largest city in Massachusetts, Springfield, is the region's cultural and economic center. This city is home to several of the region's largest employers, including Baystate Health System, Sisters of Providence Health System, MassMutual Financial Group, Peter Pan Bus Lines, Springfield College, Western New England College, Smith and Wesson, and Solutia Inc., among others. Major cultural institutions include the Springfield Symphony Orchestra, the Basketball Hall of Fame, City Stage, the Springfield Civic Center, the Quadrangle Museums, and the Dr. Seuss National Memorial Sculpture Garden.

The cities of Chicopee and Holyoke were the first planned industrial cities in America. Merchants built an elaborate complex of mills, worker's housing, dams, and canal systems that eventually evolved into cities. While many of the historic mills and industries are now gone, a number of 19th and 20th century structures have been rehabilitated and maintained through municipal preservation and revitalization initiatives.

Unique within the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the Pioneer Valley contains a diverse economic base, internationally recognized educational institutions, and limitless scenic beauty. Dominant physical characteristics include the broad fertile agricultural valley formed by the Connecticut River, the Holyoke Mountain range that traverses the region between the towns of Southwick and Pelham, and the foothills of the Berkshire Mountains. Prime agricultural land, significant wetlands, and scenic rivers are among the region's premier natural resources. Choices in lifestyle include contemporary downtown living, stately historic homes, characteristic suburban neighborhoods, and rural living in very small communities, a variety that contributes to the diversity and appeal of the region. Its unique combination of natural beauty, cultural amenities, and historical character make the Pioneer Valley region an exceptional environment in which to work, live, learn, and play.

The Economy of the Pioneer Valley

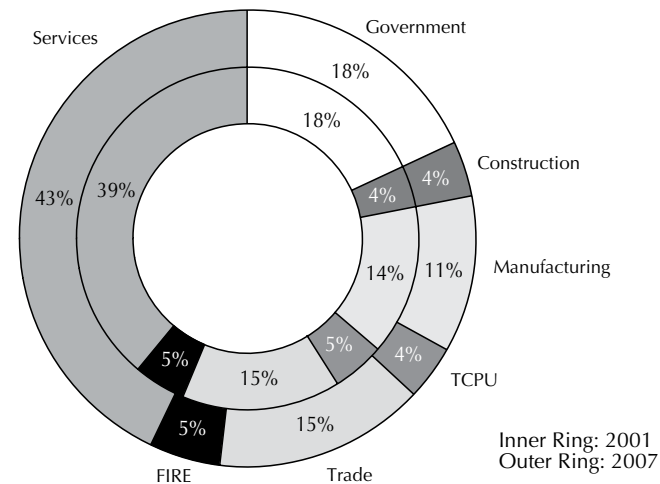

From a Goods-Producing to Service-Providing Economy

The economy of the Pioneer Valley region is in the midst of a major transition. As the cradle of the industrial revolution in America, manufacturing has traditionally played a central role in the growth and development of the region's economy. The presence of numerous swift flowing rivers, several major water and land transportation networks, and the Springfield Armory's large and skilled workforce once made the Pioneer Valley region the ideal location for large-scale industrialization.

Through the decade of the 1970s, one out of every three workers in the Pioneer Valley remained employed in manufacturing. However, like most of the nation, the Pioneer Valley region experienced a major shift from a goods-producing to a service-providing economy in subsequent decades. As manufacturing employment steadily diminished, service jobs became an increasingly large and important part of the regional economy. This trend has continued over the past several years with further declines in manufacturing corresponding to increases in the service sector. Between 2001 and 2007 the percentage of the region's jobs in the manufacturing sector decreased from 14 to 11 percent, while service jobs increased from 39 to 43 percent of total employment (Figure 1). As in many parts of the country, construction, retail and wholesale trade, government services, the finance, insurance, and real estate industries, and the transportation, communications, and public utilities industries have remained relatively stable and significant segments of the Pioneer Valley's employment base.

The majority of the region's employment opportunities continue to be centered in the Pioneer Valley's urban core—composed of the cities of Springfield, Holyoke, and Chicopee—where about 118,000 people work (Figure 2). Recently, however, new employment opportunities have emerged in the inner-ring suburbs immediately surrounding the Pioneer Valley region's urban core. In 2007 for example, 78,163 people were employed by companies located in inner-ring suburbs such as East Longmeadow, Easthampton, and Westfield. Due to the presence of five public and private higher education institutions, there is also a significant employment center with about 33,000 workers concentrated in the communities of Northampton and Amherst.

Figure 1:
Employment by Industry in the Pioneer Valley Region,
2001 and 2007

Due to the concentration of employment in the Pioneer Valley's urban core cities and inner-ring suburbs, the vast majority of wages are paid to workers who are employed in the communities of Chicopee, Holyoke, Northampton, Springfield, West Springfield, and Westfield (Figure 3). However, the highest average annual wages are found in the communities of Springfield ($46,251), Amherst ($43,122), Hatfield ($41,714), and Russell ($41,454), which, with the exception of Springfield, are not among the largest employment centers in the region (Figure 4). These communities are, however, the home base for several employers offering relatively high-wage jobs.

Manufacturing employment (Figure 5) is most heavily concentrated in the cities of Springfield, Chicopee, and Westfield, which each have more than 3,000 workers employed in manufacturing. Additionally, East Longmeadow and Holyoke both have only slightly less than 2,500 workers employed in manufacturing. By contrast, service employment (Figure 6) is more dispersed across the region with 11 Pioneer Valley communities having 2,500 or more service sector workers, eight of which have more than 5,000. (see figure 6).

From Large to Small Businesses

As the Pioneer Valley region has navigated the shift from a goods-producing to a service-providing economy, the nature of the region's businesses has also changed. The backbone of the region's economy has long been the presence and influence of a number of very large employers, often manufacturers. However, in the last 15 years, the region has undergone a profound shift as the number of very large employers has diminished and the importance of small businesses has grown. This reduction is, in part, a result of the shift away from manufacturing businesses, which tend to be large, as well as changes in business practices that have led many businesses to outsource particular functions – creating small businesses that provide numerous support functions – creating small businesses that provide numerous support functions for downsized larger businesses.

The change in the number of establishments by employment size in the region demonstrates that more and more workers in the Pioneer Valley are working for small or midsize businesses and a greater share of the region's economic productivity is generated by these businesses (Figure 7). While the total number of establishments in the Pioneer Valley region with less than 250 employees increased over the 15 year period between 1991 and 2006, the number of establishments with 250 employees or more declined. During this time period, the number of smaller (one to 49 employees) and midsize (50 to 249 employees) businesses increased by 1.0 and 15.9 percent respectively. The number of 250+ employee businesses decreased by 8.8 percent. Overall employment still grew during this period, but only by approximately 1,600 employees, or about half of one percent. On the other hand, this trend towards smaller businesses resulted in there being 219 more total establishments in the region in 2006 than there were in 1991.

Figure 7:
Percent Change in Establishments by Size, 1991-2006

Source: U.S. Census Bureau, County Business Patterns.

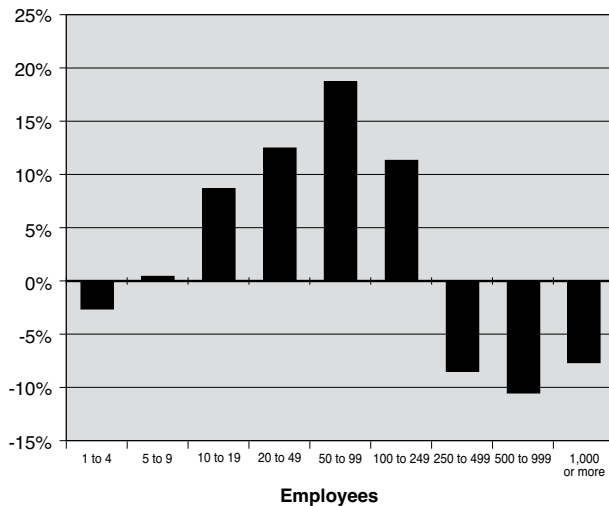

The decline in the number of large businesses was greatest among the businesses with 250 or more employees. The number of 250 to -499 -employee businesses and the number of 500 to 999 employee businesses decreased, by 8.5 and 10.5 percent respectively, from 1991 to 2006 (Figure 8). The number of 1,000-or-more employee businesses fell from 3 to 12 (Figure 9), a decline of 7.7 percent. However, even with this slight decrease, there were still 20 percent more businesses employing 1,000 or more employees in 2006 than there were in 2001 (Figures 10 and 11). Medium-size businesses, defined as those with between 50 and 249 employees, grew between 1991 and 2006. Among mid-sized businesses, the number of 50 to 99 employee establishments grew the most, with an increase of 18.7 percent (compared to an increase of 12.5 percent for 100 to 249 employee establishments). The high rate of growth for establishments of this size may also be a result of small businesses gaining more employees.

Between 1991 and 2006, the number of one- to- four employee businesses held relatively steady, showing a minor decline of 2.7 percent or a net decrease of 187 establishments. At the same time, 10 -to -19- employee businesses and 20- to -49 -employee businesses increased by 8.7 percent and 12.5 percent respectively, thus ensuring an overall increase in the number of small establishments. It is possible that this shift reflects that businesses with one to four employees have grown larger and gained additional employees. Between 2001 and 2006, businesses with one to four employees declined more than any other category, with a decrease of 22 percent. However, as with the trend of the last 15 years, establishments with five to nine employees and those with 10 to 19 employees both increased during this period.

Recent Economic Conditions

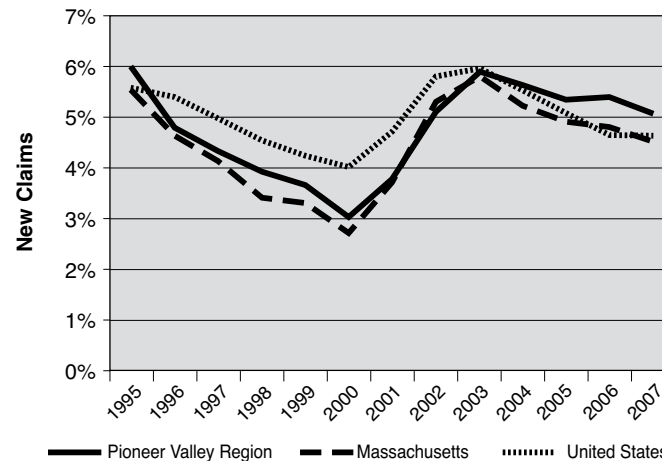

After the Pioneer Valley region's unemployment rate reached an eight-year high of 5.9 percent in 2003, the unemployment rate fell steadily from 2003 to 2007 when it reached 5.1 percent. The 2007 unemployment rates for Massachusetts and the nation were lower by comparison, at 4.5 percent and 4.6 percent respectively. During the first nine months of 2008, the region's unemployment rate increased by .4 percentage points to 5.5 percent. During the same time period, the state unemployment rate increased by .4 percent to 4.9 percent, and the national unemployment rate increased by .9 percentage points to 5.5 percent. Due to the current economic downturn, it is likely that unemployment rates will continue to increase at all geographic levels before they begin to move in a more positive direction again.

During the period from 2003 to 2007, the average annual employment (total number of people employed) in the Pioneer Valley region grew by .2 percent (or 617 workers) according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics (Figure 13). However, the total labor force in the region declined steadily between 2003 and 2007 by .7

percent, a decrease of more than 2,000 available workers. It is possible that the low unemployment rates achieved during this period were in some part related to the declines in the region's labor force, as some people who may have previously been categorized as unemployed dropped out of the labor force and thus were no longer counted as unemployed. In contrast to the region, employment and labor force size increased between 2003 and 2007 in the state and the nation. In Massachusetts, employment and labor force grew by 1.5 percent and .04 percent respectively. For the nation, employment and labor force grew by 6.0 percent and 4.5 percent respectively. This data shows that at the state and national levels, as well as in the region, from 2003 to 2007 employment growth outpaced growth in the labor force (Figure 14).

Figure 12:

Unemployment Rates, 1995 to 2007

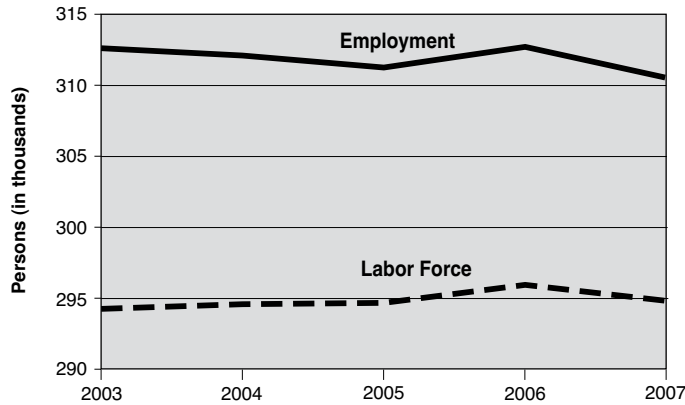

Source: U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

One useful indicator of the impact of current economic conditions on the region is the number of individuals filing new claims for unemployment insurance. The number of claims in the region peaked at nearly 4,600 new claims per month for the year 2002. Over the last three years, the average number of claims per month has not exceeded 4,000. Comparing the total claims for the first nine months of 2008 to the first nine months of 2007 shows a trend of increasing claims in 2008, with 34,558 compared to 32,575 in 2007, almost a six percent increase. This trend is not surprising considering the current economic crisis; however, it does not appear to be a significant increase thus far.

Summary of Major Employers

The two-decade-old shift from a manufacturing to a service economy is immediately evident when considering the Pioneer Valley region's largest employers. Only one manufacturer is currently among the Pioneer Valley's 15 largest non-municipal employers. Moreover, the current list of the Pioneer Valley region's 15 largest employers is clearly dominated by health care and educational institutions. On a combined basis, the Pioneer Valley's 15 largest establishments employ more than 35,000 workers, or roughly one in eight of all workers. Of these 35,000 workers, about 20,000 are employed in education and health care, which are the region's dominant service sector industries and which offer both low- and high wage job opportunities.

Education

Three of the top 15 employers in the Pioneer Valley region are educational institutions. Overall, there are 13 public and private colleges and universities located within the region, of which several are nationally recognized institutions. Together, these educational institutions employ 12,304 people in two distinct geographic clusters. In the northern half of the region, the well-known Five College area is home to the University of Massachusetts Amherst, Smith College, Mount Holyoke College, Hampshire College, and Amherst College. These five institutions together graduated 6,152 students in 2008 and employed approximately 8,382 people. The University of Massachusetts employs approximately 4,800 people, making it the largest educational institution in the region and the third largest single employer within the Pioneer Valley region.

In the southern half of the region, the Cooperating Colleges of Greater Springfield encompass the remaining eight colleges within the Pioneer Valley region. These eight colleges - American International College, Bay Path College, Elms College, Holyoke Community College, Springfield College, Springfield Technical Community College, Western New England College, and Westfield State College - employed 3,922 people and graduated 6,365 students in 2008. Together, the 13 colleges and universities afford residents of the Pioneer Valley region a multitude of educational opportunities and provide employers with an annual pool of skilled talent. This broad higher education sector provides the region with a strong employment base and a superior foundation from which to launch many of the region's economic development initiatives.

Hospitals

Employing even more workers than the region's colleges and universities are the Pioneer Valley's twelve hospitals, which employ a total of 12,461 workers. Baystate Medical Center in Springfield is the region's largest hospital and employer with 4,737 full time employees on its payroll. Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton is the second largest with over 1,600 employees. In addition, Holyoke Hospital and Mercy Medical Center in Springfield also boast substantial employment for the region and their host communities, with over 1,400 and 900 employees respectively. The Department of Mental Retardation Monson Developmental Center employs 425 people. Overall, the health care industry is growing in the region and provides a source of well-paying jobs with good benefits. Nurses and other skilled workers will be important for the future growth of this industry.

Health Care and Human Services

Along with hospitals, the human services, outpatient health, and nursing care industries are growing in the region. Baystate Health System employs 1,778 people outside of Baystate Medical Center, providing outpatient services. Outside of Mercy Medical Center, the Sisters of Providence Health System employs 1,276 people providing outpatient services. The Springfield-based Center for Human Development provides a wide range of community-oriented human services throughout the region and employs a total of 945 people. RiverBend Medical Group provides a wide offering of outpatient health services in Chicopee and employs 554 people. The Westover Job Corps Center, based in Chicopee, employs 400 people and offers vocational classes and job training programs. In Longmeadow, Jewish Geriatric Services Inc. employs a total of 380 people, 250 of whom work specifically at the Julian Leavitt Family Jewish Nursing Home. Together, the largest nine health and human services organizations employ over 6,000 people throughout the Pioneer Valley region.

Paper Manufacturing

Paper manufacturing is one of the oldest and most enduring industries in the Pioneer Valley. Because of the region's large stands of timber and ample water power from large, swift rivers, the Pioneer Valley became one of the first areas in America to produce paper and paper products on a massive scale. The city of Holyoke, bearing the nickname "Paper City," was once home to over 30 independent paper mills. Although many of these mills have now closed, the region retains a vibrant paper manufacturing industry with a particular emphasis on the manufacture of high-value specialty papers and coated papers. Even now, there are 15 paper manufacturers operating in the Pioneer Valley region and each employs 100 or more workers. The top manufacturer in the region, National Envelope, produces envelopes and is located in Westfield, employing 364 people. Ludlow Technical Products, an affiliate of Tyco International, produces a wide range of transfer tapes and employs 350 individuals at their plant in the city of Chicopee. Avery Dennison, a well-recognized manufacturer of label products for home and office use, employs 287 people at a facility that is also in Chicopee. Together, the largest 15 paper manufacturers in the Pioneer Valley region currently employ about 3,000 people.

Metal and Machinery Manufacturing

The birth of the metalworking and machining industry in the Pioneer Valley can be directly attributed to the establishment of the Springfield Armory in the late 18th century. Lured by the availability of cheap water power and skilled metal smiths working in the Armory, many entrepreneurs established metal and machine shops in and around the city of Springfield. As a result, the Pioneer Valley became a major metal and machinery manufacturing center and these industries flourished well into the 20th century. Over the last four decades, however, many of the region's metal and machinery firms have found it increasingly difficult to compete against low-cost foreign and domestic rivals and have closed their doors. Nevertheless, a vibrant metal and machinery industry remains with an increasing focus on niche and specialty products. Springfield is home to Smith and Wesson, one of the leading manufacturers of firearms and firearm accessories in the nation. Also headquartered locally, Lenox Tools, formerly American Saw and Manufacturing, produces hand tools and employs 550 people in East Longmeadow. Kollmorgen Electro-Optical is located in Northampton and employs 330 people. U.S. Tsubaki Roller Chain Division operates a factory in Holyoke producing machinery for the auto industry and employing 200 people. Kidder Inc. is the other major machinery producer in the region, manufacturing machinery for use in the paper industry and employing 150 people. Combined, the seven largest metal and machinery manufacturing firms employ about 2,500 people.

Municipal Employment

In general, throughout this report, local government entities have been excluded from the lists of major employers so that the report's focus could remain on the constitution of the private sector employment here in the Pioneer Valley. However, the prominence of local government employment cannot be ignored, as some municipal employers are among the largest employers in the region. For example, the City of Springfield and the Springfield Public Schools, when combined, have about 5,721 employees, almost as many as Baystate Health System, the region's largest employer. Table 7 lists those municipal employers with 250 or more employees, with school departments separated from the remainder of municipal government. In total, there are 17 school districts and eight city governments with 250 or more employees. Generally, these include the larger cities of the Pioneer Valley region as well as the large inner-ring suburbs surrounding those cities. Together, these municipal employers have a combined workforce of about 19,000 people, from teachers to police officers.

Other Major Industries

Within the Pioneer Valley region there are several other industries that are vital to the regional economy and employment base, but these industries are represented only by one or two major employers. For example, the MassMutual Financial Group of Springfield is the only major provider of financial services based in the region, but with about 4,300 workers, it is a significant industry unto itself. Two of the region's major employers, Big Y Foods Inc. and Wal-Mart, are in the retail sector, with approximately 3,300, and 1,400 employees respectively. The Springfield locations of the U.S. Postal Service make up the fifth largest employer in the region with 2,520 full time employees, 1,740 of whom work at the regional Bulk Mail Center which services Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Connecticut, Rhode Island, and parts of New York State. C&S Wholesale Grocers Inc. employs about 1,000 people in Hatfield and Westfield. The state Department of Mental Retardation employs about 1,200 people throughout the region. Located in East Longmeadow, Hasbro, formerly Milton Bradley, manufactures children's games and toys and employs 1,100 workers, making it another major regional employer. Westover Air Reserve Base in Chicopee, the largest air reserve base in the United States, employs 1,100 civilians plus numerous military personnel.

Methodology

This report is an attempt to identify the Pioneer Valley's largest employers. We are releasing this list of employers, as well as the size of each employer's workforce, in order to help elected officials, developers, researchers, economists, planners, and others gain a better understanding of the region's economy and its workforce. The economy of the Pioneer Valley region has undergone substantial changes within the past two decades, and this is reflected in the changing size and shape of the region's major employers. For the purpose of this report, a major employer within the Pioneer Valley region is any that employs at least 50 people at a single location. All employers are listed with NAICS (North American Industry Classification System) codes, the official Bureau of Labor Statistics industry categories for reporting employment data.

The primary data source for this report was an employment list purchased from a private vendor (InfoUSA, Inc.) in January 2008. This data was supplemented by an online version of this database that is maintained by InfoUSA, Inc. While the data from InfoUSA was generally of good quality, calls were made to confirm the employment figures listed within the database. To further the accuracy of this data, private and non-profit employers were called if they were either listed in the database as having over 250 employees in 2008 or if they were listed as having more than 200 employees in the last Major Employers report, published in 2003. Those municipal employers which InfoUSA reported had 50 or more employees were also called. The response rate with telephone calls was over 96 percent. If any employer was unavailable for comment, the employment figures listed in the database were assumed to be true and were used.

Additional corrections were made to information listed within the database based on our own knowledge or reports in the media. For example, several new companies not listed in the database were added, while numerous businesses no longer in existence were removed. Municipal employers were deliberately removed from the list of major employers so that the actual lists of major employers reflect private and nonprofit sector establishments. Municipal employers are listed separately. In addition, all restaurants, except those providing catering and banquet services, were deliberately removed from the list of major employers because it is impossible to be sure if the employment total in the database reflected full-time or part-time employment.

Finally, town or city clerks were contacted in all 43 municipalities in the Pioneer Valley region to provide communities an opportunity to review the final lists that were created from this research. Through this final contact, any changes suggested by the municipal officials were confirmed by contacting the business or other relevant offices, such as the town assessor's office.

Detailed and meticulous care was taken to ensure that all data obtained from the database and telephone interviews was as accurate as possible. Nonetheless, we anticipate numerous errors in the employer lists simply because it is virtually impossible to develop a fully accurate list within reasonable time and cost limits. Every effort was made to ensure that the 100 largest employers, as well as the largest municipal employers, reported only full-time employment. However, we expect that some numbers provided to us included part-time employees. Rather than attempt to adjust these numbers using what would be an arbitrary method, we have included employment totals as they were given to us or as they were reported in InfoUSA's database. Despite the inevitable inaccuracies, we believe this report presents an accurate picture of the nature and size of employers within the Pioneer Valley region.
